Comforting Words

In the superior court room on Monday morning Judge Shumway was in attendance to hear the condemnation proceedings of the board of water commissioners of Norwich vs. James Raymond Palmer and Carrie A. Palmer of Montville. The commissioners desire the Palmer property for the Story brook reservoir, but cannot reach a satisfactory agreement with the owners as to the pricefiz.

A motion to quash was presented by Attorney C. W. Comstock in behalf of the property owners on these grounds: First—No right, power or outhority is conferred upon said board of wrater commissioners or of the common conveil of the city of Norwich to and their merits in a public statement of the common conveil of the city of Norwich to and their merits in a public statement.

First—No right, power or outhority is conferred upon said board of wrater commissioners or of the common council of the city of Norwich in and by virtue of the special acts and laws referred to in the application of the said petition empowering or authoizing the board of water commissioners, or the common council of the city of Norwich, to take, condemn or appropriate to and for the use of said city of Norwich any real estate or water rights situated in said town of Montville without the assent of the owner of said property.

Second—Sald board of water commissioners by virtue of said special act with the consent of said common council are limited in their power, scope and authority, by virtue of said special acts, to the taking and condemning of real estate and water rights, in invitum to the territorial limits of said city of Norwich. The application and proceedings of the petitioners is an effort to take and condemn private property without due process of law.

The motion was argued at length by

Attorneys Comstock and Fanning, the former claiming that the water commissioners cannot go into Montville and take land by condemnation. Judge Shumway reserved his decision for two weeks.
